PRESIDENT PREPARES TO ISSUE SWEEPING FIAT AGAINST STRIKES

"Runaway" Congress Sets The Stage For Enactment of Anti-Strike Laws

DO NOT WAIT SIGNAL

Roosevelt Ready To Use Army Troops; Must Be No Defense Strikes

By Jack Vincent
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
WASHINGTON, Nov. 13—(INS)—President Roosevelt prepared today to issue a sweeping fiat against defense strikes as a "runaway" Congress—alarmed over threatened nation-wide coal and railroad walkouts—set the stage for enactment of anti-strike laws without waiting for a White House signal.

Mr. Roosevelt, ready to use Army troops if necessary, will lay down the ultimatum that there must be no defense strikes when he presides at a momentous White House conference tomorrow between John L. Lewis and steel industry leaders. The President hastily called the conference in an attempt to avert a strike by Lewis' mine workers union in the coal mines of the steel companies mid-December.

The White House meeting will be held as the full UMW policy committee of 200 also gathers tomorrow in the mine workers headquarters in Washington within shouting distance of the White House. They will decide whether to call a strike to back up Lewis' demands for a union shop in the steel-owned coal pits.

All indications pointed to the possibility, according to informed labor circles in Washington, that the policy committee not only will give Lewis authority to call a strike of the 53,000 miners employed by steel companies but also empower him to call a nationwide coal strike, if necessary.

Threat of the mine strike arose after the Defense Mediation Board voted, 9 to 2, against giving the mine workers a union shop following some 58 days of consideration of the case. CIO president Philip Murray and Thomas P. Kennedy, UMW secretary-treasurer, immediately resigned as Mediation Board members.

Anxious Over Failure of Litvinoff's Plane To Arrive

London, Nov. 13—British officials today admitted "some anxiety" over continued lack of word of the plane carrying Maxim Litvinoff, new Soviet envoy to the United States, American Ambassador Laurence A. Steinhardt, and Sir Walter Monckton of the British Ministry of Information.

Their plane was long overdue at Teheran after leaving Moscow.

Says Democrats Aided In Republican Victory

Harrisburg, Nov. 13—The Republican victory at the polls November 4th was aided in part by "Jeffersonian Democrats who bolted the Republican ticket because they found the New Deal repugnant and dangerous," GOP State Chairman James P. Torrance declared today.

"We use the term 'New Deal' advisedly," Torrance said, "because there is no longer any doubt, on the basis of election returns, but that many Democrats who cling to the honored traditions of the old Democratic party of Jefferson's day, bolted to the Republican ticket."

"Americans, regardless of political convictions, still place the destiny of state and nation first in their hearts and minds. They reject the right of any party to brazen usurpation of governmental authority."

German Losses Big

London, Nov. 13—On the basis of details received from Russian sources, British authorities said today that German losses up to November 9th indicated that 16 of the 19 German armored divisions have "suffered appreciably" in the Russo-German war.

They declared the 8th German armored division, which was withdrawn from the front early in September, has only just reappeared in action, "indicating that grave losses had to be made up."

In addition, it was claimed, appreciable casualties have been inflicted on more than 70 German infantry divisions, including motorized, light and mounted units. In several instances, the British said, it is believed the casualties suffered by these divisions were as high as 50 per cent.

TELEPHONE STRIKE SET FOR FRIDAY MIDNIGHT

15,000 Long-Distance Operators and Maintenance Workers To Go Out in 42 States

MEMBERS VOTE A STRIKE

NEW YORK, Nov. 13—(INS)—A strike of 15,000 long-distance telephone operators and maintenance workers in 42 states was called for midnight tomorrow following a breakdown in the negotiations between leaders of Long Lines Telephone Workers, an independent union, and officials of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company.

John J. Moran, president of the union, announced that at the stroke of 12 all of the operators would quit their jobs, with the exception of those handling communications connected with defense. If effective, the strike will tie up long distance telephone communication of the entire nation and seriously disrupt news teletype transmission and chain radio broadcasting.

Moran said the strike, which was approved by a vote of the membership November 3rd, was called to bolster the union's demands for a four per cent wage increase and a narrowing of geographic pay differentials. The strike, he said, will take effect in all states except Washington, Oregon, New Hampshire, Vermont, Nevada, and Montana.

STUDENT WRITES STORY ABOUT EDUCATION WEEK

Tells of the Value of Education In Making A Strong America

MISS MAE ANDERSON

In connection with the 21st observance of American Education Week the following story has been written by Mae Anderson, 11-A student in the Bristol high school:

Education for a Strong America
Today everyone is aware of the teeming activity carried on in the interest of our national defense. What does all this bustle mean to you—the boys and girls of high school and college age? Let me begin to tell you what it should mean.

A very little and not at all concentrated bit of thought will recall to our minds Lincoln's definition of a democracy—a government of, by, and for the people. American citizens choose from among them a man and set him at the head of our nation. They vest power in a congress of men chosen from their own states and districts. These same people, whose voting privileges enable them to choose the men they wish to run their government, turn the wheels of American industry and farm the land which furnishes food for the population. Then, too, we must not forget the teachers, lawyers, doctors, and other professional men.

Soon each and every one of you will graduate into the ranks of the people who conduct our industry and run our government. How well you will be able to handle your place in America and help to make her strong? We need only think of the trials and testings of those diligent, loyal men of the colonies who strove with heart and soul to secure for us the guarantee of our rights.

PROPER DRAWING OF A DEED WELL EXPLAINED

Charles B. Ermentrout, Esq., Addresses Bucks County Real Estate Board

PLAN FORUM AND PARTY

DOYLESTOWN, Nov. 13—A talk dealing with the subject of "Deeds," was a high-light of the November meeting of Bucks County Real Estate Board, last evening, when members gathered in the Fountain House, for their monthly session. The speaker on this subject was Charles B. Ermentrout, Esq., of Southampton.

Mr. Ermentrout traced every detail in the drawing up of a deed, explaining fully all facts pertaining thereto. He gave various incidents noted in his career in connection with deeds, showing how in some instances one word could make a great difference in the actual substance of a deed.

Charles H. Hoyer, of Bustleton, was the presiding officer, both at the regular dinner meeting, and at the session of the board of directors which preceded.

A number of guests were present on this occasion, including several secretaries of the realtors, who showed keen interest in the proper drawing up of deeds.

William A. Rossiter, of Langhorne, the board's secretary, was named as the representative on the "Fair Rent Commission" of the Bucks County Defense Council.

The annual Christmas party of the board is planned for Wednesday evening, December 10th, at Doylestown. All active and associate members are urged to be present for the affair, as special plans are being outlined for a gala event. J. Carroll Malloy, Jr., heads a committee of eight making arrangements.

The board is also planning an income tax forum to be conducted in January at the regular meeting. A representative of the Internal Revenue Department is expected to be present to explain the new income tax law.

An open forum and transaction of business followed.

DORON GREEN IS HONORED BY SCHOOL FACULTY, DIRECTORS

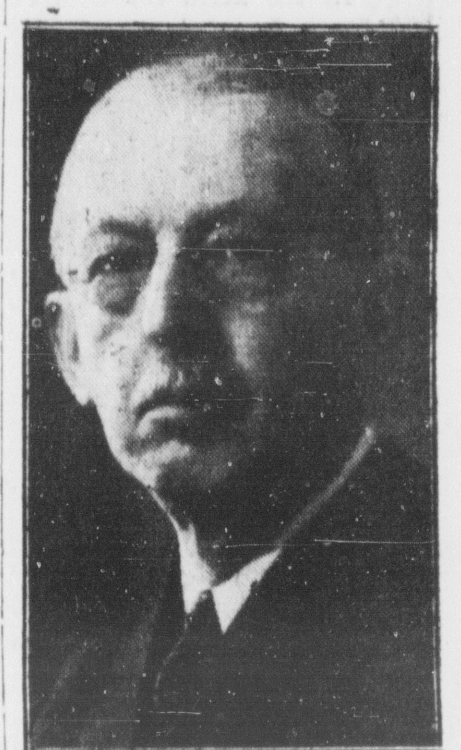

Served As School Director For 42 Years and Board President for 25 Years

GIVEN A GOLD WATCH

Dr. Francis B. Haas, Sup't of Dep't of Public Instruction, One of Speakers

Acknowledgement of unselfish public service was made last evening when tribute was paid to Doron Green, president of Bristol borough board of school directors, for 42 years of nurturing activity in the interest of the public school system of Bristol.

The testimonial dinner, served in the auditorium of Bristol high school, was arranged by members of the board of school directors, and of the faculty of Bristol public schools.

Lauded for his membership on the board, and devotion to such a public office for a period extending over more than four decades, for 25 years of which he served as president of the board, Mr. Green was presented with a fine gold watch and chain, a gift from those assembled. The watch was suitably engraved with the following words: "To Doron Green, for 42 years of distinguished public service on the Bristol Borough School Board, November 12, 1941. Presented by His Contemporaries."

Words of appreciation and tribute were paid to Mr. Green by the toastmaster of the occasion, Paul V. Forster, secretary of the board; the guest speaker of the evening, Dr. Francis B. Haas, Harrisburg, State Superintendent of Public Instruction; and by former United States Senator Joseph R. Grundy.

Eighty were gathered about the tables above which appeared a picture of "Old Homes on Radcliffe Street," a number of school pupils having prepared a large Radcliffe street scene in color, in honor of the director who recently completed and published a "History of Old Homes on Radcliffe Street." Guests were greeted in an attractive palm-decked foyer, especially arranged for the occasion at the entrance of the banquet hall.

In addition to the guest of honor and Mrs. Green, and the speakers, there were seated at the main table Mr. Green's son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Green, Bristol, his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Leatham, of Brookline; S. Bradley Ardrey, vice president, and Mrs. Ardrey; and Mrs. Paul V. Forster.

As a special contribution to the evening program Mr. Forster read an abstract from the minutes of a board meeting of June 6, 1899, in which it was stated that Mr. Green, with others, had been qualified as members of the board. "Thus, with simplicity was begun a career destined to be outstanding in the history of Bristol public schools—one in which 42 years of untiring service were given. Any attempt to lay before you the full records of that career would be futile, as minutes are only mere outlines of what took place down through the years. We do know, however, that the faithful, devoted service was freely given by our guest of honor in the advancement of education in this community." Taking a glance backward, the toastmaster continued by comparing facts and figures of the local school system 42 years ago with those of today. He reminded Mr. Green and the others present that 42 years ago there was a board membership of 12; four school buildings including Washington, Bath and the old Wood street schools, together with the Wood street school which was then the high school building. The enrollment for that period was about 800 with an average attendance of 84 per cent. Eighteen teachers and one superintendent, Miss Louise D. Baggis, were engaged. The operating budget totalled $14,000, with teacher salaries being $8700. "None of the buildings had electric lights as

TURN IN TIDE!

It does not require a military mind necessarily to sense hourly a change in the nature of the conflict overseas, with a switch likely in the fortunes of war, on all three sectors of the Russian front. In a different way each sector shows this.

In the north colder weather is freezing the fluid terrain, making possible mass movements again with the Russians demonstrating a new initiative. According to the best information obtainable, it appears that the Germans are not as near Leningrad now as they were a month ago. If it were not for the aid being given Hitler by the Finns on this front, the situation of the Germans in the north would be precarious.

In the central sector the ground on the approaches to Moscow is still a sticky, gumbo-quagmire, with motorized movement hors de combat. On this sector, too, the Germans have made no progress in weeks. Apparently all four of the prongs of the invaders' advance have been arrested and new German assaults must await the firmer footing which will come with a heavy freeze. If the freeze is accompanied by deep snow the Nazi position will not be improved.

In the southern region the weather is not impeding movements on either side. Colonel von Kleist, with Rostov as objective, is advancing toward that city with tanks in formation in what appears to be the heaviest assault of that kind in the entire struggle so far.

Before the war De Gaulle told a tragically unheeding France that the tank would therefore be decisive in warfare. Stalin has said the same thing in recent days. Von Kleist is giving this theory a full test.

But the Russians are meeting him in fierce fighting, and if Budenny, and Timoshenko break him out, side Rostov the tide of war will have turned without a doubt.

SHIPMENTS TO RUSSIA

Not so many days ago there was a curious outcropping in the shipping news that led to an impression in some quarters that the United States was discontinuing shipments to Russia via Vladivostok and that it would hereafter send munitions to Russia through Archangel.

It now develops that the United States has not withdrawn from the Vladivostok route. That idea originated in the designation of Boston as a port for the export of goods to Russia. Boston has been complaining that it had not been getting its share of business.

At that it is not likely that Boston will see many cargoes go to Russia in the near future. The harbor at Archangel freezes up in the winter and rail transportation into the interior of Russia from Archangel is not now feasible.

Chances are that most of the shipments to Russia will go by the way of the Persian Gulf, thence over the Iran railroad to the Caucasus. There is talk of establishing a motor truck line across Iran, similar to that on the Burma road, to supplement the transportation of freight on the railroad, none too well equipped with locomotives and rolling stock.

GOOD HEALTH MAY BE SECURED EVEN WITH LOW-COST FOODS

By Miss Edna Stepany

(Home Economics Representative)
The less money there is to get the right kind of a diet, the more important is the homemaker's food judgment to the health of her family.

The less money there is to spend, the greater is the problem of assembling meals that are both nutritious and attractive. But it can be done, and is being done every day by women who shop intelligently, who keep food values uppermost in their minds as they plan meals.

As a help to the homemaker operating on a limited food budget, Doctor Hazel K. Stiebeling and her co-workers of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, have developed a master low cost diet plan. To be a useful guide in all parts of the country, this plan has been outlined in terms of food groups

Instead of naming each individual food.

As a basis for the low-cost plan, the new national yardstick for good nutrition was used. This yardstick sets a new high goal for the meal planning of the whole country. In terms of necessary food values, the yardstick recommends the daily allowances of each food needed to keep the whole family in good health.

First item in the low cost master plan is milk. This includes milk to drink, milk for cooking, and milk in the form of cheese or other dairy products. Every child gets three to four cups a day. Every adult gets two to three cups. Each expectant mother gets one quart, and a nursing mother one and a half quarts.

Potatoes and sweet potatoes are called for about twice a day because they are economical sources of many of the food values specified in the nutrition yardstick. Dry beans, peas, and peanuts are called for two to four times a week. They are especially valuable as sources of iron and protein in low cost diets.

Tomatoes, citrus fruit, or other vitamin C rich foods are included five times a week at least. Every child under four is allotted one serving a day, every nursing mother, one to two servings daily. Among economical "other vitamin C rich foods" are raw cabbage and raw salad greens.

Leafy green and yellow vegetables are served in a low cost diet at least six times a week. Everyone in the family has three to four eggs weekly.

The diet plan provides six small servings of lean meat, fish, or poultry each week. There should be a cereal dish once a day, sometimes twice; bread in some form at every meal and dessert once a day, if desired. From 30 to 50 per cent of all the cereals served should be the whole-grain kind, because of the iron and other minerals and vitamins they provide.

Much can be done to cut food costs by careful selection within each food group. The lean parts of low cost cuts of meat are just as nutritious as those from more expensive cuts. Certain

Union leaders, who previously expressed a willingness to call off the strike if the dispute is certified to the National Defense Mediation Board, said the decision to make the strike effective at midnight tomorrow was made after yesterday's meeting with company officials and representatives of the U. S. Conciliation Service, showed that no effort had been made to have it certified.

In telegrams to officials of the Army, Navy, FBI, Defense Communications Board, Civil Aeronautics Administration, and the three major radio networks, Henry Mayer, counsel of the union, said the LLTW wished to provide sufficient help to maintain wires for national defense purposes during the strike.

The strike, in addition to cutting off all private long distance and international phone calls, will, if effective, tie up telephone wires which carry the news of the major press associations, inter-city radio hookups, and the transmission of wirephotos.

William S. Paley, president of the Columbia Broadcasting Company, replying to Mayer's telegram, urged that there be no interference with radio broadcasting on the grounds that "four functions in connection with national defense are to contribute to the maintenance of high public morale."

Memorial Fountain Is Center of Controversy

council has no authority in the matter whatever, as the memorial was erected on the site which it occupies as the result of an agreement entered into between Hopkins Lodge and the Bristol W. C. T. U. In this agreement, Hopkins Lodge agreed "to grant the perpetual use of a piece of ground along Walnut street front of the property for the location of the fountain." This privilege, according to the agreement, it is stated, was to be transferred to any new owners of the property.

Several years ago water was turned off at the fountain due to the fact that as a watering place for horses it had ceased its usefulness.

The W. C. T. U. members placed the fountain to honor the memory of a most active worker in the union, Mrs. Swain, who was the wife of Samuel Swain.

SURVEY OF NEW MEXICO

SANTA FE, N. M.—(INS)—New Mexico, which produces a large portion of the nation's supply of pumice, is being surveyed for new deposits of that valuable abrasive. Dr. S. B. Talmadge of the New Mexico School of Mines, who is leading the survey, said that pumice, much used as a scouring and polishing agent in defense work, is now more in demand than ever. With imports from Italy cut off by the war, he said, the demand is far exceeding the supply.

Emerald Embassy by FRANCIS GERARD

SYNOPSIS

Tragedy visits the village of Weyland, England, when Ambrose Pennyfeather, a respected citizen, is murdered. The local police cannot solve the murder, so Yves Blaydes-Steel enlists the aid of Sir John Meredith, former Scotland Yard ace, when the latter accompanies him next morning on a diplomatic mission for Yves brother, Lord George Lanchester. For generations it has been the custom for the current Lord Lanchester to act as representatives of the Crown in presenting the Dwan (Sultan) of the Island of Sulungu with a price-less emerald as a token of good will between the two sovereigns, dating since 1835, when the then Lord Lanchester deposed the tyrannical Dwan of the island and seated the latter's cousin on the throne. In recent years, Buna Thalan, the present ruler, has come to England to receive the gift, which has assumed even greater international importance, for Japan is presumed to be eyeing the island, which is strategically located for a submarine base. There are now 101 jewels in the chain. Yves substitutes for his ill brother and goes to receive necklace from the Dwan to have the new emerald added. Yves and Sir John receive a cool reception from the Sultan, who obviously distrusts them. They bring the necklace to London and are stunned to learn it is an imitation. In the presence of Monachet, the jeweller, and two witnesses, Sir John forges the jeweller's name to a receipt for the genuine necklace. Later, convinced of Yves and Sir John's sincerity, Buna Thalan admits he gave them the imitation necklace because he had been warned they were imposters, and turned the genuine jewels over to thieves. He suspects the Countess Anne de Vassignac, Parisian social leader and a descendant of the deposed Dwan of Sulungu, who aspires to the throne. At the time Yves and Sir John are talking with the Dwan, Philip Horton, ex-officer of His Majesty's Engineers, calls on the countess, with whom he is infatuated. He had been cashiered from the army because of money trouble . . . money he had spent on Anne.

CHAPTER ELEVEN

"I've loved you all these months, Anne, and . . . despite . . ." The man's face looked haggard and tired. He went on with difficulty. "Despite your reputation, I've respected you."

"That's true enough, Philip. But you're a terrible bore at times. 'I suppose I am,' he nodded. 'But I've loved you. . . Many have.'"

The countess shrugged her head down against the white pique of the cushion. Her actions were quite deliberate.

Philip Horton looked at her as though he were seeing her for the first time. "I wonder," he said speaking very slowly, "I wonder when someone will kill you, Anne."

"I wonder," she echoed, stretching lazily like a cat.

At that moment her husband walked into the room. Raoul de Vassignac at this time was about twenty-six, a platinum-blond with over-long, beautifully waved hair. His exquisite hands were charmingly ringed. His dressing-gown was of white satin with a scarlet girdle of silk cord. His small feet were sandalled, the heels being unusually high. Altogether he was very exquisite. He was quite small, with a pair of limpid blue eyes which looked the bluer for the delicate shading of the long, black, curling lashes.

Philip Horton glanced at him with an expression of contempt.

"Anne-Marie," began Raoul in his sweet, reedy voice, "I have reached an impasse in my new poem."

"Imbecile!" exploded Anne de Vassignac in French. "What do I care for your stupid verses!"

Quite downcast, Comte Raoul de Vassignac, lineal descendant of a great soldier who had defied all the power of Richelieu, almost ran from the room.

"He's a worm, isn't he, Philip?" she asked in English.

Horton sighed. He nodded. "Yes," he said, "A worm all right."

"And now then, Philip, tell me what you have done today. Is it all settled?"

"The Sulungu necklace is yours," said the man slowly, "whenever you wish to take it."

"And the hiding place has been assured?"

He nodded. "And I might add that I think I have never heard of anything more dreadful in my life."

"O la-la! You English are absurdly sentimental. What does the death of a man mean in power politics—even those of Sulungu? You fool, Philip, do you not think other men will die before I sit upon that throne? Last year when my cousin, Buna Thalan, was on his way to England for his annual visit, he stayed in Paris for a week, as is his custom, and I called upon him at his hotel for I wanted to see for myself what sort of man he was."

"And what sort of man is he?" asked Horton bitterly.

The girl smiled that slow smile which had set so many men's blood pounding as she replied, "My sort of man."

"Is there any sort of personable man who is not your sort?" snored Horton who was now seated at the foot of the day-bed on which she was lying.

"Salud!" hissed the little countess, slapping him savagely across the mouth.

For a long minute he stared at her, his eyes speculative; then he struck her left cheek with a resounding smack.

For a moment, Philip thought she was going to launch herself upon him in a frenzy of hysterical rage; then her expression changed, her eyes darkened, her throat swelled perceptibly and she put long, slim fingers to her face where he had hit her.

"I think," she said slowly, "that you are not going to be such a bore after all."

The next moment she was in his arms.

On the whole, George Lanchester took the news pretty well when early next morning, Meredith drove over with Yves from Radfield Place where they had spent the night. Their demeanour as they were met by Angela was deliberately cheerful so that none could suspect anything had gone wrong. It was only when they were in Lord Lanchester's bedroom that they dropped the mask.

When his younger brother had told him that the Sulungu necklace had disappeared the earl sat propped against his pillows for several moments without speaking. Angela eyed her husband anxiously and was relieved when she heard him say quietly, "Well, it's gone. Nothing can alter that. Now, I suppose, we'd better see what can be done about it."

"I'm awfully sorry, George," Yves began, "I wouldn't—"

"That's all right, Yves," interrupted Lanchester. "It's not your fault. He hesitated a moment, then said quietly, 'How much cash can you raise at the moment, old man?'"

It was Meredith who prevented a reply by saying, "Look here, George, don't let's look at it from that angle just yet. We have some indication as to what line to work along."

Angela smiled suddenly from her seat at the foot of her husband's bed. "You're a brick, John! We seem to be saddling you with quite a number of our problems what with poor Mr. Pennyfeather and now this."

Meredith stared at her rather blankly for a moment and then smiling ruefully, said, "Good Lord, Angela, I'd quite forgotten Mr. Pennyfeather!"

Just then Stokes appeared with a large silver tray on which stood two decanters of wine together with four glasses. When he had gone, the conference began.

Characteristically, it was Meredith who started the ball rolling. "The thing that seems to stick out a mile, as I see it," said he, "is the fact that the thieves had advance information as to what precisely was going to take place yesterday morning at Paddock Wood. By that, of course, I mean what was due to take place. The emerald presentation procedure was unlike that of any previous years in that you, George, were not going and Yves was. Further, it was evidently known that I was going with him. Now then, who told these thieves?"

He looked from face to face but they remained blank and he went on, "Who knew about the arrangements?"

It was Angela who answered. "Well," she said hesitantly, "just us. Just the family."

Meredith rose to his feet and began to prow restlessly about the room, his eyes on the floor. "But that isn't strictly true as I know for a fact."

He paused for a moment. They watched him in silence and he went on, "In the first place, there was at least one other person who knew about the arrangements for yesterday morning because Yves had a letter of introduction to the Dwan. That letter was typed. Who typed it?"

"Oh, that," said Yves. "Norma. Norma Hailey, George's secretary. She's all right."

"Oh, yes, John. You can leave Norma out of it, I assure you," said Angela.

"Why?" said Meredith. "There was a short . . . before George Lanchester . . . in his bed and said, 'Why? Well, because . . . well, because we know Norma's all right.'"

"Why?" said Meredith again, this time most irritably. "Angela smiled slightly. 'I can see your point of view, John,' she said quietly. 'Norma is just a possible suspect to you, but we know her.'"

"I'm," said Meredith rubbing his chin and sounding quite unconvinced. "What's her history?"

Angela turned to her husband and asked, "How did Norma come to us?"

The earl scratched his nose. "Let me see," he began. "Wasn't it Bridget who recommended her? Oh, no. Of course not!"

"Norma was planted on you, George," said Yves, from the window, "by the Gramophone."

"Most informative," said John. "Will someone translate?"

It was from Angela that he learned Miss Hailey's story. "It was a year ago," she said. "No, not quite a year, about eight or nine months, that the Gramophone came and told us."

"Paris!" exclaimed Meredith. Angela nodded rather ruefully. "You're thinking of a possible connection with the de Vassignacs?" She shook her head. "I think you can rule that out, John. Wait till you've seen Norma. You'll know there's nothing about her to have brought her within their orbit at all. She's . . ."

"Got no allure," put in Yves Blaydes-Steel.

Lady Lanchester smiled. "I'm afraid that's true," she admitted. "At all events, she's the daughter of General Hailey who died suddenly, while Norma was at her art school in Paris, and left her without a cent. Her mother was already dead. Veronica Stream knew her father apparently and took the girl under her wing. Fortunately, the child had learnt shorthand and typing so as to ensure some sort of job for herself if her painting proved unsuccessful, and George took her on. That's really all. She was at a convent in this country, and is painfully respectable."

"Well, so much for Miss Hailey," said Meredith. "What about the servants?"

Again there was general hesitation and Angela said, "Well, Stokes may have known about it. I suppose he probably did, but Stokes is really one of the family and has been with us for years."

It was at that moment that Stokes knocked at the door to inform His Lordship that Inspector Rainbird was calling.

Student Writes Story About Education Week

tees of freedom and liberty and the form of government which we enjoy today, to make us want to do our best to protect and preserve those liberties. How can we best make sure of this preservation?

The answer: Education.

Educate these high school students so that they can intelligently choose men capable of filling the position of president. Educate them so they can help elect men, or themselves be elected to positions in congress. Industry needs skilled labor, a need which can be met by education in industrial training schools. Farming is no longer the mere plowing and sowing and hard labor usually associated with it but has become a science in itself.

An America governed by a capable, just president and intelligent representatives, with smoothly running, co-operative industries will necessarily be a strong America. Education will bring about these conditions and the education of you boys and girls will make America strong.

Other CIO officials also rushed to support the mine workers, including John Owens, influential Ohio CIO leader, who quit the office of OPM labor chief Sidney Hillman in protest. Even George Meany, AFL secretary-treasurer, said that he thought Lewis' union shop demands were justified.

While the stand of the UMW threatened to wreck the Mediation Board and left Mr. Roosevelt confronted with prospects of a coal strike, the Big Five railroad operating brotherhoods in Chicago voted to call a nationwide strike of railroad workers beginning December 7th in their demands for increased wages. Ultimately, the strike, if called, might affect some 1,200,000 unionized railroad workers.

Officials in Washington, anxiously watched the outcome of the coal conference at the White House for an indication as to how Mr. Roosevelt might meet the threatened railroad walkout. Besides Lewis, CIO leaders Murray and Kennedy will attend the meeting. Representing the steel companies will be Benjamin Fairless of U. S. Steel, Frank Purnell of Youngstown Sheet and Tube, and Eugene Grace of Bethlehem Steel.

Sugar and Spice

"Sugar and spice and everything nice; that's what little girls are made of," runs the old nursery rhyme. Apparently the writer had a leaning toward sweet and spicy foods just as most of us have today. In fact, grandmother's cookies, cakes, and preserves would be proof enough without the jingle.

Now that pumpkins are on the market and we still have spices on our pantry shelves, why not vary your pumpkin-custard dessert by using one or both of the recipes below—one for the sweet-tooth owner and one for the lover of spice?

Pumpkin Rennet-Custard (Serves Five)

- 1/2 cup plum butter,
- 2 cups milk, ordinary or homogenized,
- 1 cup canned pumpkin

- 1 package vanilla rennet powder
- 4 tablespoons brown sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
- 1/2 teaspoon ginger
- 1/2 teaspoon salt

Divide plum butter among 5 dessert glasses, placing about 2 tablespoons in the bottom of each. To the milk, add pumpkin which has been thoroughly mixed with brown sugar, spices and salt. Follow directions on package vanilla rennet powder and pour, while still liquid, into dessert glasses on top of plum butter. Do not move until firm—about 10 minutes. Chill in automatic refrigerator. Just before serving, sprinkle with grated blanched almonds.

Spice Rennet-Custard

- 1 package maple rennet powder
- 1 pint milk, ordinary or homogenized
- 1/2 cup chopped dates

Doron Green Honored By School Faculty and Directors

gas was then in use; there was no telephone service nor sanitary facilities continued the toastmaster. Then it was mentioned that the budget today annually is $145,000, with teacher salaries listed at more than $90,000 per year; with an enrollment of about 2400 in 1933-34 having now dropped to some extent. At one time during Mr. Green's presidency the teacher list was 72, and is at present 66.

Mr. Forster informed that Mr. Green's first appointment had been to the book and library committee; and cited examples of "good statesmanship" exemplified throughout his years as a director, he becoming the board's "specialty man." Difficult problems which confronted the board from time to time, with hours of work entailed, were mentioned; together with information on expansion of the school system, building and acquiring of school houses; additions to number of courses in the high school curriculum, and general improvement of the work of the schools down through the years. Mr. Forster also recalled to mind that "those in public office know the real sting of criticism, in spite of their attempts at sincerity and honesty."

Mr. Green was elected president of the board in June of 1916, serving in that capacity for 25 years. "The schools of Bristol have seen their greatest period of expansion in Mr. Green's time of service as president," added the speaker; who at this point also paid tribute to former Senator Grundy for his generosity, which materially aided the school system on many occasions. Mr. Green's financial ability which has proven of such great service to the board was acknowledged by Mr. Forster; who also told of his work on the auditing committee and estimating committee; and the part he played in preparation of budgets. "Be it said to the everlasting credit of Doron Green that this board has never once defaulted on any bonds, bond interest, teachers' salaries, etc. He has adhered rigidly to the policy of paying as you go. . . . The history of what has been accomplished in Bristol schools in the past 25 years is the history of the accomplishments of our esteemed president, Doron Green."

In reply, Mr. Green stated that "Simple words are inadequate to express the deeper feelings of the heart. I appreciate the kind words of Mr. Forster, and hope I am worthy of them," he then expressing thanks for the testimonial dinner and the gift of the watch. In a brief period of reminiscence, Mr. Green named some of the teachers serving when he was first elected as a director. He touched on various highlights of the school's history, and expressed gratification over the expansion and improvement of the school system, speaking feelingly of his associations with board members and teachers.

Dr. Francis B. Haas, Superintendent of the Department of Public Instruction of Pennsylvania, commenced his address with a bit of doggerel entitled "Ships"—"How many pleasant dreams we spin. Of fortunes when our ship comes in; forgetting meanwhile all about the fact we never sent one out." Then he added, "But we are honoring this evening a gentleman who sent some ships out." Dr. Haas, in looking at world conditions, then stated that present problems when reduced to the lowest "common denominator" show there are two opposing governmental philosophies at war.

And Mr. Green has had a part in the governmental philosophy we are upholding—42 years of service to the children of our commonwealth; 42 years of specialized official service to that institution which against the background of our governmental philosophy has been specifically developed as our fundamental method of national defense. . . . In honoring Mr. Green you are acknowledging belief in an American institution in a very special way. You are doing a nice thing tonight. So often we don't. So often it is in an adverse way we look at people."

Dr. Haas, in humorous vein, touched on early methods of educational practice, displaying an early text-book. In conclusion he read an excerpt from "The Temple Hills," a tribute to the public schools and to those who serve them. "Ladies and gentlemen, I congratulate you in honoring one of your number who has helped to build one of these temples."

Former Senator Grundy, when introduced to the gathering, reminisced also on local school activities. He paid tribute to Mr. Green's forethought, vision and judgment, both in business affairs and in activities of the board of directors. Mr. Grundy called attention to Mr. Green's contribution to recorded history of the borough, mentioning that such is a work that will live on. Some consideration was then given by the speaker to the privileges experienced under a democracy such as is followed in the United States of America, mentioning that a gathering of this kind could scarcely exist in countries of Europe or Asia today. He compared care-free enjoyment of life seen in the United States with the conditions under which those of other countries find themselves; and added first-hand information on lives of refugees, including entire schools of pupils, with whom he has come in contact during the past few years in the Bahamas. In conclusion he stated that "Mr. Green's life and accomplishments are a tribute to our democratic form of government."

The evening was also enlivened with music, both group singing and specialty numbers. The Bristol high school glee club, under direction of Charles Quigley, sang "School Days," "Seeing Nellie Home," and "Alma Mater." The second group of selections was inclusive of "I Love A Parade," "When You and I Were Young Maggie," with solo parts by Jay Hart and Joseph Galzerano; "Legend," and "When Day Is Done," solo part of the latter number being by Louis Rotunno.

A specialty number, much enjoyed, was by a guest artist, who provided ventriloquism, tricks of magic, and unique cartoons.

The blessing was invoked by Eugene Barrett, a member of the high school faculty.

Attractive Color Plan Is Arranged For Choir Social

The First Baptist Church choir held a business meeting, Tuesday evening, in the social room of the church. Twenty-five members were present. Besides transaction of regular business, plans for the Christmas season were presented and the members were advised by the music director, Miss Winifred Tracy, that they would soon begin rehearsing the number to be presented at the Christmas worship service. The president Mrs. Edward Klair presented a basket containing the names of the members of the choir, and each member drew a name from the basket and will present the person whose name they drew a present at the Christmas party.

The hostesses, Mrs. John Weik and Mrs. Warren Talbot, seated the guests around a table appropriately decorated with flags, and a color scheme for Armistice Day. Each member received from the hostesses a novelty favor containing a cap to be worn during the evening, and a cap-bomb. Hot-apple dumplings with cream sauce were served.

Today's Quiet Moment

(By the Rev. James R. Gailey)

Pastor, Bristol Presbyterian Church

Heavenly Father, write Thy Name of Love upon our hearts this day. Help us to remember Jesus Christ. During the busy hours bring Him often to our thoughts. When the mind is free from some set task may it revert to Him, as the needle turns to the pole. Keep us from wounding Him in word or thought or deed. Make our communion with Him sweet. Give us of His strength. His wisdom. His winsomeness. Forgive the professions which have been but empty words, and lead us to fuller consecration in His service. In the Name of Jesus. Amen.

ON THE SCREENS

GRAND THEATRE

Joan Crawford, Robert Taylor, Greer Garson and Herbert Marshall come to the screen as a notable all-star cast in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "When Ladies Meet," opening at the Grand Theatre. Based on Rachel Crothers' stage play, one of the big successes of Broadway, it is a lighthearted comedy of tangled loves and bewildered lovers, directed by Robert Z. Leonard.

Miss Crawford plays a sentimental woman novelist, loved by Taylor. She "falls" for Herbert Marshall, her publisher. The jealous Taylor gets an idea and arranges for Miss Crawford and Miss Garson, who plays Marshall's wife, to meet. Not knowing they are love rivals, the two women become great friends.

BRISTOL THEATRE

For the first time in cinema history, Hollywood is showing on the screen the secret methods used by Uncle Sam in deporting undesirable aliens from the United States. It is in "Mystery Ship," sensational Columbia melodrama, which is now playing at the Bristol Theatre, with Paul Kelly and Lola Lane in the leading roles. "San Antonio Rose" is also shown.

RITZ THEATRE

Three ferocious-looking Indians who make a tepee out of a millionaire's mansion, four Vice Presidents of the nation who make a simultaneous appearance at a society party, and two romantic youngsters who elope in a bakery truck, is the basis for comedy in Leon Errol's newest feature film farce, "Hurry, Charlie, Hurry," which had its initial showing at the Ritz Theatre.

"Broadway Limited" is the other feature.

BENSALEM OWLETTES LOSE HOCKEY CROWN; DEFEAT FALLSINGTON

GAIL KING WAS STAR

Scored Three Goals For The Girls From Cornwells
Heights

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Nov. 12.—The Bensalem Owlettes won their hockey tilt with Fallsington yesterday but lost its championship crown because New Hope beat Buckingham, 2-0, in the game which decided the final standing of the Lower Bucks circuit. In the final standing, New Hope had 12 points to its schedule while Bensalem had 11. So until next season, the championship cup will remain the possession of the New Hope eleven.

Three goals in the first period gave the Bensalemites the tilt over Falls who staged a gallant rally but only succeeded in shaving the Smith-girls' lead to one point.

Two players scored the entire five goals of the game. Gail King registered three goals for Bensalem while Fallsington pair was credited to Parr. Parr scored her tallies on passes from the defense while King was the recipient of short passes from Hughes, Stuhldrager, and Ely.

Bensalem forward line did some excellent passing while Fallsington's second-half playing was outstanding.

Bensalem has a game to play with Doylestown today and will meet Bristol at Cornwells Heights next Tuesday afternoon.

BRISTOL RAMBLERS TO PLAY DISTON TEAM

The Bristol Ramblers will cross sticks with the Henry W. Diston roller hockey club tonight at the Frankford Rollerdrone.

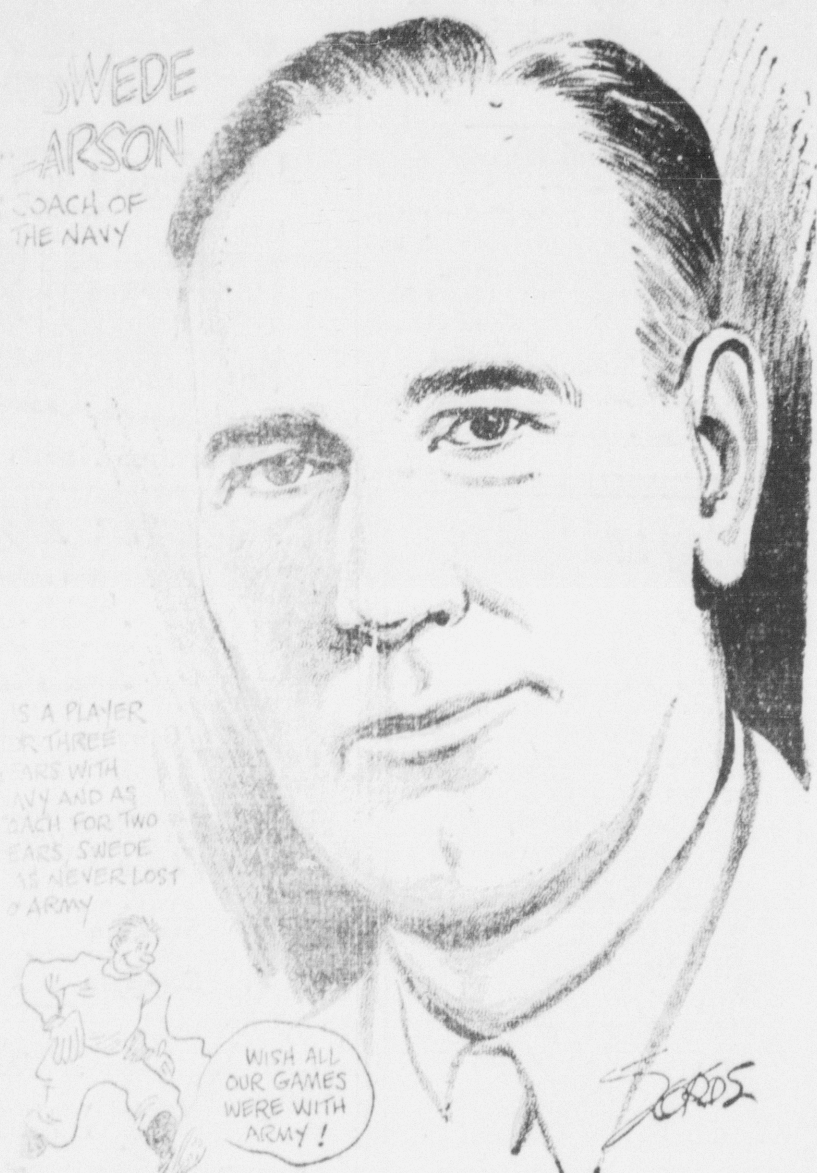

The Diston club is the only roller hockey club representing the City of Philadelphia this season, and their coach, Larry Gear, has molded together a scrappy and fast skating club, with his players being the choice of different rinks in the city.

Coach "Pop" Keene feels sure that his squad of Ramblers will be able to keep the name of Bristol high up in the roller hockey world.
